

Autumn Henson is a practicing geriatric nurse practitioner, assistant professor and wound care consultant in Winston-Salem and Greensboro, NC. She has been working with long-term care and with wound care for over 18 years, starting first as an RN after graduating from Western Piedmont Community College, and then completing her Bachelor of Nursing at Winston Salem State University. She soon pursued her passion, graduating from Duke University with Master of Science in Nursing with geriatric nurse practitioner and family nurse practitioner. In 2018, Dr. Henson completed her goal of achieving her Doctorate of Nurse Practice from the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Henson currently works with Physicians Eldercare in Winston-Salem, NC and The University of North Carolina at Greensboro in Greensboro, NC. She loves specializing and educating others in overall older adult healthcare including chronic conditions, end-of-life care and especially wound management.